

Returned Elders.

er Edward Crowther, of Logan, upon us today, having arrived morning from the mission field, a company of six others. He left in October, 1885, on a mission to Southern States. He labored the six months of his absence in the Tennessee Conference, and during the rest of his mission in North Carolina. The general prospects of work in the latter state are promising much more so than they were years ago. Baptisms are of frequent occurrence. Elder Crowther is in excellent health and spirer John V. Bluth, of Ogden, was of the party, and called at this office with a company with Elder Crowther. He returned home in January, 1886, and labored in Tennessee during the entire term of his mission. The work in that state is in a very fair condition, frequent baptisms, though great ignorance and prejudice exist. Some new fields are now being opened up. Both of these Elders express sincere gratitude to the friends whom they met while on their missions.

The brethren are of the eight returning missionaries from the Southern States who went with a company of others from that section to their new homes in Colorado. The migrating brethren locating there have excellent prospects of material prosperity. Water and timber are abundant. Elder Bluth's health was far from good, which is one reason for his return home.
